Paesaggi Italiani Collection

Design by Giovanni Luca Ferreri

The journey of rediscovering Italy's most unique nature trails continues by enriching the collection with new nuances that evoke the peninsula's most hidden and primitive nature. Designer Giovanni Luca Ferreri echoes this contrast by combining finishes with simpler, minimalist shapes that revive sublime, Schopenhaueresque emotions in furniture and décor. You will find the vulnerability of the volcano Etna embracing rounded and calm forms, the flaky shores of Gargano and Lipari moulded with flat and smooth elements, and the powerful Miage glaciers melted on transparent surfaces.

The design is a study of natural and artificial materials. The large panels are made of stone and wood, with a focus on texture and color.

The Kluq is a stone glacier. When the sky is overcast, the dark, storm colours are reflected in its base, creating a range of reds, powerful greys and blues.

Paesaggi Italiani

The journey continues through an itinerary among the extraordinary places of our peninsula, accompanied by architect-designer Giovanni Luca Ferreri: from the mighty Etna, with its deep ruptures, to the silvery swarming of the waters around Liguri; from the flaky coasts of the Gargano to the crystal-clear walls of the Malga glacier.

The colours, lights and vibrations that nature's wonders convey, stirring us with emotions are found on the surfaces of "Paesaggi Italiani".

Stromboli

Sometimes it so happens that at night, on Stromboli, the sea churns under a full moon. That night the water is coloured with an archaic bronze. We have imprinted it on the glass.
